#SantaMariaStyle
Santa Maria Valley is more than just a springboard to all that the Central California Coast has to offer. As a welcomed guest to our friendly and unpretentious region, you will discover a true change of pace. Unmatched wine. Out-of-this-world barbecue. And genuine cultural experiences. Santa Maria Valley offers a boom of breathtaking activities designed for your enjoyment.

In a place rich with culture, wine and events, Santa Maria Valley is California’s hideaway from the hustle and bustle. Yet, its vibrancy comes from gathering with personable people who are ambassadors of good times had by all. Whether it’s sharing a bottle of Pinot Noir with girlfriends, taking a weekend tour of breweries and steakhouses with buddies or snuggling up to the one you love as you wiggle your toes in the Dunes, you don’t have to try hard here.

Hop aboard our charming wine trolley to experience wine country a whole new way. Check out some of our popular events. The Brews and Cues Festival happens in the spring and the not-to-miss Central Coast AirFest takes place in the fall. Or choose from dozens of other fantastic happenings ranging from classic car cruises to beer yoga to holiday parades. Definitely look us up during Restaurant Week in January where you can indulge in culinary delights all over town. You can even take a two-day trip for $500 or less and savor award-winning wines paired with authentic Santa Maria Style Barbecue.

With 15 beaches and 34 tasting rooms all within a 30-minute drive, Santa Maria Valley is the perfect home base to get more for less. Hit the road and explore all you can do. That’s what we call #SantaMariaStyle.

Most people are shocked when they discover that luffas—a type of sponge that are most commonly used to exfoliate the skin while bathing—do not come from the ocean like sea sponges. Luffas are actually gourds like pumpkins, squash and melons. Like all gourds, luffas grow on flowering vines inside hardshelled pods. Similar to the form of cucumbers, the long gourds that grow on sprawling vines can be harvested and dried. When luffas are in an early stage of development, you can actually harvest and eat the fruit inside! But as the fruit ages and becomes fully developed, it becomes drier. Once the luffas are in optimal condition, they can be peeled to reveal the soft spongy interior that we know and love.

Santa Maria Valley is home to our very own Luffa Farm, in fact, it is called The Luffa Farm and it’s located in the town of Nipomo, less than 20 minutes from Santa Maria. The five-acre Luffa Farm proprietor, Deanne Coon, grows luffas year-round using her own heirloom seeds. Native to the Old World tropics, The Luffa Farm is one of the few luffa farms left in the United States. Visitors can purchase their own natural luffas here as well as other goodies to take home a spa-like experience. Visitors can buy soaps, bath salts, lotions, foot soaks, oil blends and more. The farm is open to the public and offers free tours Wednesday through Sunday from 10 a.m. – 4 p.m.

Since the 1700s, Oso Flaco Lake, which means “skinny bear” in Chumash, has become a local favorite for recreation activities including fishing, birdwatching, and hiking. The Oso Flaco Lake hiking trail is an easy, 1.7-mile, out-and-back trail located in the Oceano Dunes State Vehicular Recreation Area.

This trail takes hikers through the park, past the fresh water lake, across a boardwalk overlooking a beautiful natural area, and ends at the Pacific Ocean. The trail is good for all skill levels and perfect for families, offers a number of activity options, and is accessible year-round.

The lake’s name is centered around an old tale by the native people, the Chumash. The tale says that the Chumash had fed the bear tainted meat so they wouldn’t be competing for resources. This is how the bear from the area became “skinny.” Recognized for its multiple diverse natural habitats, the lake covers 75 acres and helps create a safe haven for more than 200 species of birds and an abundance of wildflowers. The park also offers a perfect spot for bike rides along the tall willows and wax myrtle trees, which serve as the home to many of these birds. Whether it be birdwatching or a peaceful walk, Oso Flaco Lake hikers will see something interesting no matter where their heads turn. The route that leads to the overlook is wheelchair accessible—perfect for all who visit. When you reach the end of the trail, finish off your day with a picnic along a secluded beach or meditate as you hear the sounds of singing birds and the rhythmic waves.

Oso Flaco Lake is also a favorite among local fishing enthusiasts. Anglers are able to fish in the fresh water lake itself, or they can try their luck with saltwater fish at the beach. Enthusiasts can cast their lines in Oso Flaco Lake, Little Oso Flaco Lake, Oso Flaco Creek or the Pacific Ocean. Before you cast your line, you’ll need to pick up a fishing license. There are several license options in California, and you can easily get one online. If you’re a visitor to the area, your best—and most affordable—bet is to get a one-day or two-day sport fishing license. Short-term sporting licenses allow you to fish in fresh water or in the ocean.

If you’d rather look to the skies, Oso Flaco Lake is also a stunning spot for birdwatching. The Santa Maria Valley is an under-the-radar destination for birding enthusiasts. The Valley’s unique geographic location provides extensive opportunity for enthusiasts. Santa Maria Valley rests in the middle of two of the best birding spots in the nation, Santa Barbara and Morro Bay. Because of its closeness to both the Pacific Ocean and oak woodland habitats, birdwatchers have access to two unique locales.

Where the sea meets the land, this park offers visitors a chance to explore and enjoy an undeveloped gem on the California coastline.

Bird Watcher’s Digest recently published a feature on Santa Maria Valley, attributing the Santa Maria Valley as “an incredible birding area.” Bird Watcher’s Digest named a few of the best locations to spot birds throughout the Valley, including Oso Flaco Lake. Where the sea meets the land, this park offers visitors a chance to explore and enjoy an undeveloped gem on the California coastline.

The Santa Maria Valley is an under-the-radar destination for birding enthusiasts.

There is no entry fee to visit the park, however there is a $5 parking pass. The lot opens at 7 a.m., which allows visitors to the park to get an early start if they desire. Leave your furry friends at home for this day trip, and enjoy a peaceful day of hiking, birding, fishing and more at one of our favorite places in the Valley.
Just south of Santa Maria is Old Orcutt – a historical gem of the valley. You’ll find friendly faces as you dine, shop, and mingle in our authentic, vibrant, little town that’s been bustling since 1904. Come visit!

Naughty Oak Brewing Co. is an essential part of the Central Coast craft beer scene and a local staple for creative beer offerings and tons of fun. Naughty Oak is named as an homage to the red oak trees that grow in the Santa Maria Valley and used in traditional Santa Maria Style Barbecue. This delicious hub for beer lovers offers crafty concoctions on tap and cold brew coffee.

Whether you’re a hoppy brew lover or blonde ale enthusiast, Naughty Oak is known for its laid back atmosphere—perfect for hanging out with friends any day of the week. Naughty Oak is ideally situated in Old Town Orcutt, where the small downtown district features several restaurants that you can order out from while you enjoy your pint.

Both Steve and Emily manage all aspects of their business—you are likely to bump into one or both of them when you’re visiting the taproom.

Known to give creative brew names to their craft beer, including Staycation, Gold Digger and Anthony Hopkins, there’s a special brew for anyone who visits. Steve recommends pairing an IPA with pizza from Pizzeria Bello Forno, which created a special pizza for Naughty Oak called the 3 Beer Pizza.

Naughty Oak’s owners, Steve and Emily Kitts, wanted the brewery to provide everything you need when searching for a day of fun. Steve’s parents were home brewers, and he naturally followed in their footsteps. In 2016, he chose the brew life and began brewing beer full-time, establishing Naughty Oak shortly after. Both Steve and Emily manage all aspects of their business—you are likely to bump into one or both of them when you’re visiting the taproom.

Naughty Oak hosts beer yoga, beer and cheese pairings, weekly trivia, live music and more. If you’re looking for a place to eat a delicious brunch, don’t miss out on their weekly brunch on Sunday—complete with breakfast beers and beermosas (a variation of mimosas) and cold brew coffee made in shop.

A place once occupied by the Chumash people and Spanish settlers, Misión la Purísima Concepción de María Santísima (Mission of the Immaculate Conception of Most Holy Mary) was founded by Father President Fermín de Lasuén in 1787.

The mission’s first inhabitants herded nearly 20,000 cattle and sheep and were well known for producing exquisite blankets and hides. Today, La Purísima is the most extensively restored mission in California and is visited by more than 200,000 guests each year.

La Purísima Mission is the only California mission with hiking trails. Boasting more than 25 miles of trails on 2,000 acres, La Purísima Mission remains one of the Central Coast’s historic treasures. Explore the land with a free one-mile expert-guided walking tour or go on a solo adventure. The historic culture of the Chumash and Spanish people remains through the self-guided tours and hikes, allowing heritage to flow through the Santa Maria Valley.

Throughout the year, the mission offers a wide array of activities for the entire family to enjoy, including “mission life days” where you can participate in tortilla and candle making, carpentry, pottery, blacksmithing and more. Village days allow visitors to experience the blending of the Chumash Indian and Colonial Spanish cultures by partaking in activities that were crucial to daily survival for the people of this time. Additional activities include acorn grinding, basket weaving and learning traditional Chumash games.

No matter when you visit, La Purísima Mission is a place where you can experience a mix of California’s past and present history through culturally enriching events, activities, hikes and more.
WELCOME TO THE BEAUTIFUL CENTRAL COAST.

The Chumash people once numbered in the tens of thousands and lived along the coast of California.

At one time, Chumash territory encompassed 7,000 square miles that spanned from the beaches of Malibu to Paso Robles. They called themselves the “first people” and called the Pacific Ocean their first home. The Chumash enjoyed a more prosperous environment than most other tribes in California because of the rich resources from both the land and sea.

The Santa Ynez Reservation is located in Santa Barbara County, about 40 minutes away from Santa Maria, and was established and officially recognized by the federal government on December 27, 1901. Today, the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians remains the only federally recognized Chumash tribe in the nation.

The culture of the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians is deep within its members as they’ve maintained a strong connection to their traditional beliefs, priding their survival on their strength as a tribe and their spiritual connection to Chumash heritage.

Many cultural enrichment programs exist for Chumash members, including basket weaving and Samala language classes, which ensure that the Chumash culture remains strong within the tribe and is preserved for future generations.

Every October, the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians hosts its annual Chumash Inter-Tribal Pow-Wow, welcoming tribes throughout North America to gather and celebrate their Native American Heritage.

“It’s an opportunity for us to partner with tribes from across the country to share our song, our dance and our customs,” said Kenneth Kahn, Tribal Chairman of the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians. “It’s also an amazing opportunity for local families to come together, have a great day and learn more about tribal cultures.”

Being a successful tribal government in today’s climate requires innovative and extraordinary leadership. The Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians take great pride in their ability to govern themselves successfully and operate their tribal enterprises with confidence, integrity and business savvy. The Chumash Casino Resort has quickly become one of the most successful business ventures in the Santa Ynez Valley and one of the largest employers in Santa Barbara County.

Giving back to the community has always been a tradition of the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians. There was once a time when tribal members in need received donations from generous members of the community.

Today, the Santa Ynez Chumash are now in a position to return the favor. Over the years, the tribe has committed more than $25 million to local nonprofits and partnered with a number of organizations that have enhanced the lives of residents throughout Santa Barbara County and beyond.

With family ranching roots dating back to 1911, Tyke was born into the ranching lifestyle and has ranched professionally for 55 years—though his work on his family’s Guadalupe ranch goes back over 60 years when, as a young boy, he’d help fence off fields of sugar beets to keep the beet tops from getting eaten. Today, he manages both the ranch in Guadalupe and a smaller ranch in Tepusquet, where he lives with his wife Sheryll.

Between those two bookends of his life, though, are decades of ranching stories and a library of accomplishments in the cattle- and horse-breeding world—which Tyke prefers to keep tightly-lipped about.

“I don’t like to brag about it,” Tyke said when asked about his long list of accolades in horse breeding and showing—a list that includes 21 wins at the Santa Barbara Fiesta Horse Show. “I was always kind of reserved.”

One thing he will tell you, though? “I think I gave the horse world the 20 best years of my life. I was in the prime of my life, and we had a decent success doing it.”

When you talk to Tyke, one thing is abundantly clear: all of that experience comes with something even more important than the awards and accolades—deep wisdom and a warm way of life—one that’s centered around patience, choosing your battles, and, yes, good barbecue with great friends.
1. It goes back to patience.

While there’s always a job to be done on the ranch, that doesn’t mean the work is fast-paced or on your desired timeframe. From an animal’s mood on any given day to the year’s weather patterns, it’s nature (not humans) that drives operations on a ranch—and this often requires a willingness to both work hard and go with the flow. “You learn that you’re not going to conquer everything everyday,” Tyke says. “It goes back to patience.”

When herding cattle in the spring, for example, ranchers often have to wait for the fog to clear to ensure they don’t miss any cattle. “It was a long day in the springtime,” Tyke recalls about his days on the ranch as a young man. “We put in some long days.”

Naturally, that same patience applies to training horses. While the more modern approach to training is often fast-paced, Tyke prefers taking your time in order for a horse to reach his full potential.

“The old style we follow is still the best if you want to end up with the best horse in the end,” Tyke says. “It takes three to four years to train a horse properly and then you got a horse that lasts you a lifetime.”

Tyke’s willingness to wait extends all the way to his secret for the best barbecue. He always ages his beef for 30-50 days in the refrigerator before he grills it. “That’s the whole secret of having good tender steaks,” Tyke says.

2. Give and take and get along.

Along with the patience required for a good horse or a tender steak comes another important life lesson: choosing your battles—knowing when to push versus when to allow something to happen in its own time. Tyke has learned something unique from each of his horses (“They’re all different,” he says)—but, most importantly, he’s learned flexibility.

“With horses or cattle or anything, you learn to read their minds a little bit,” Tyke says. “Sometimes, it’s better to agree with one today and not fight with him. You get older and you think you want to get something accomplished on a certain day, where, if you put him away on a good note, they’ll be good again the next day.”

“It’s no different than raising a kid,” Tyke, who has a 47-year-old daughter (a bilingual teacher in Guadalupe) and a 50-year-old son (who works in vegetable production in Santa Maria), says. “It all comes back to ‘give and take and get along.’

One of his favorite things about the give-and-take of ranching? It keeps you on your toes.

“That’s the one thing about the ranch,” Tyke says. “We’re always changing. You have something different to do all of the time. It keeps it interesting.”

3. Barbecue is the best payment.

Tyke is no stranger to the centuries-old tradition of Santa Maria Style Barbecue. He’s spent countless meals eating alongside the vaqueros and neighbors who help during cattle-branding each year—slow-roasted tri-tip and pinquito beans are a tasty form of payment after a long day’s work.

“The tradition’s always been that you invite your neighbors, people who help you,” Tyke says. “The early vaqueros used to get together and throw a barbecue with salsa and beans and French bread dipped in butter and green salad—and pie or cake or ice cream for dessert. You gotta feed your help.”

Today, he has both an indoor and outdoor pit where he and his wife cook traditional Santa Maria Style Barbecue regularly—both as a dinner for two and, during cattle branding season, as a thank-you feast for the friends who helped. “That’s their only pay is what you feed them, so you try to feed them a nice meal.”
Boasting a beautiful climate and award-winning wine, there’s always an opportunity to relax and unwind in the Santa Maria Valley. Escape with a $500 Wine Getaway weekend for two, where you can hike historic trails, tour vineyards in the second-oldest American Viticultural Area (AVA) in California, and do so much more. Come see for yourself why Travel Channel named Santa Maria Valley one of the Top 10 Cities for Wine Snobs. Our delicious and award-winning Pinot Noirs, Chardonnays and Syrahs will satisfy every wine lover, but you won’t find any snobbery here. With so much to do and see, don’t be surprised if one weekend in the Valley isn’t enough.

Day One

Visit the cnagy and CORE tasting rooms in Old Town Orcutt to begin your wine experience. Whether you enjoy red or white wine, the Santa Maria Valley has something special for every vino lover.

Explore different local wineries and eateries by going for a ride on the seasonal Santa Maria Valley Wine Trolley, where you will visit several local tasting room favorites and sample award-winning wines all in one trip. Show your hotel key card at one of many tasting rooms in the Santa Maria Valley, including Cambria, Cottonwood Canyon, FOXEN or Riverbench, to receive a free tasting. If beer is more your style, you can also use this promotion at Naughty Oak Brewing Co. And yes—it’s okay to ask for two room keys when you check in!

Day Two

On your second day in the Valley, take advantage of the Santa Maria Valley’s year-round pleasant weather, which allows you to get outside in the region no matter when you visit.

If you’re driving, we encourage you to bring your bike. There are hundreds of miles of cycling trails in and around the region. We would recommend cycling the Foxen Canyon Wine Trail. And no trip to the Central Coast is complete without first digging your toes into the sand at one of the 15 beaches nearby. One of our favorite beaches is the Rancho Guadalupe Dunes Preserve inside the Guadalupe-Nipomo Dunes, which offers plenty of opportunity to see local plants and wildlife. Then, stop by the Guadalupe-Nipomo Dunes Center, a museum showcasing pieces of history from the dunes and artifacts from the 1923 movie, “The Ten Commandments,” including an entire sphinx head that was excavated from the dunes.
You can find almost any type of dining experience in the Santa Maria Valley, but no trip to the region is complete without stopping for a plate (or two, or three!) of authentic Santa Maria Style Barbecue. While you’re here, splurge a little and get a taste of true California heritage. Santa Maria Style Barbecue is California’s Cut, with a rich history and roots that date back to the 1800s. After cattle round-ups, local ranchers would thank their neighbors and vaqueros (cowboys) by preparing a Spanish-style feast that consisted of meat slow-roasted over the flames of a red oak fire, served with a side of pinquito beans and fresh green salad.

Santa Maria Style started as a cut of top-block, but has since evolved to include tri-tip, a small, triangular cut from the sirloin that our Valley popularized in the 1950s. One defining feature has remained the same all these years: to be considered Santa Maria Style, it has to have been cooked over red oak, and preferably rubbed with Santa Maria Style seasoning—a simple-yet-flavorful blend of salt, pepper and garlic powder.

Day One

You can get a variation of Santa Maria Style Barbecue at many restaurants in the region, but Far Western Tavern, The Hitching Post and Shaw’s Famous Steakhouse are all classic staples for a Santa Maria Style Barbecue lunch or dinner.

Only 15 minutes away, you’ll discover Orcutt, a small town with antique charm, to satisfy all your local shopping needs. You can show your hotel key card at Naughty Oak Brewing Co. to grab a complimentary after-dinner taste of beer. Old Town Market has everything you need to make the perfect Santa Maria Style Barbecue meal at home—plus it’s a perfect location to find take-home treats for all your friends. Be sure to download the free Santa Maria Style cookbook to get recipes and tips and tricks from barbecue pros.

Day Two

Start off your day at The Swiss for breakfast or brunch. The Swiss is one of the region’s oldest barbecue restaurants. If there’s any place you will find true Santa Maria Style fare, it’s here.

To finish off your day with a smile, take a walk around Oso Flaco Lake where you can explore around the tall willow trees all the way to the serene Guadalupe-Nipomo Dunes.

The Santa Maria Valley is renowned for its Pinot Noir, Chardonnay and Syrah. Our Valley's unique geography creates microclimates that allow varying types of grapes to prosper in different ways. We often characterize our wines and winemakers into two categories—those grown on the Santa Maria Bench and those grown off the bench.

On the Bench

The Santa Maria Bench is located on the eastern edge of the Santa Maria Valley AVA, in the foothills of the Tepusquet Mountains. It runs along the bank of the Sisquoc River and sits higher than much of the surrounding Valley. The bench is very shallow and rocky—but it contains alluvial soils, which are made up of alluvium, a material deposited by rivers. The rocky ground provides excellent drainage, while the alluvial soils give a fertile space for vines to grow.

The mountains surrounding the Santa Maria Bench are part of California's Transverse Ranges, meaning they run east-to-west, as opposed to the general northwest-southeast orientation of most other ranges in California. Much of the bench is sheltered from the wind by the surrounding mountains. Fog from the Pacific Ocean rolls over the vineyards on the bench, burns off mid-morning and rolls back in late afternoon. The unique geography and topography breed an ideal microclimate for growing grapes because grapes hang longer on the vine and develop more complex flavors. Wines grown on the Santa Maria Bench have round textures and notes of earth because of the loam and stones in the soil. To sample wines from vineyards on the Santa Maria Bench, try Cambria or Byron.

Off the Bench

Grapes not grown on the Santa Maria Bench are grown closer to sea level and exposed to more sunlight. Vines that grow off the bench are located further away from the mountains, and don't have as much as exposure to the foggy microclimates. You can taste the difference between the wines grown on the western side of the Santa Maria Valley—off the bench—which are fruiter and spicier. To sample wines from off the bench, try Presqu’île or Ca’ Del Grevino.

The Santa Maria Valley’s unique terrain allows visitors to experience both microclimates in one trip. Taste both earthy bench wines and bright wines from off the bench within a 15-minute drive. The Santa Maria Valley AVA’s unique transverse geography and temperate climate make for wines that you have to experience to believe.

   a. Anywhere with a bustling atmosphere. Bright lights, big city!
   b. A tropical, sandy beach destination where I can spend time relaxing and recharging with a glass of wine.
   c. The destination doesn’t matter as much as who you spend it with. I’m happy anywhere my friends or family are!

3. What’s your go-to comfort food?
   a. I’m a pizza lover to my core. Extra cheese, please!
   b. I want to dive into a plate of fried chicken with mac and cheese.
   c. I’ll always opt for a big, juicy burger.

4. If you could describe your personality with a color, which would you choose?
   a. Bright, bold yellow or orange.
   b. Cool and serene blue or green.
   c. Bold and daring pink or purple.

5. What’s the best way to spend a Sunday afternoon?
   a. Sampling the menu at the popular new restaurant, brewery or wine bar. I’m always down to go another round.
   b. Spending the day with friends and family at home, it’s all about quality time.
   c. Adventuring outdoors! I’ll be there, whether it’s at a beach, on a hike or on a bike.

6. How do you spend the holidays?
   a. I do holidays BIG. All the food, all the drinks, and all the guests at my parties. After all, more is more!
   b. The holidays are best spent with the people closest to you. Warm nights around the fire, plenty of relaxation and a bottle (or two, or three) of wine.
   c. The holidays are for vacationing! I’ve had my holiday trip planned for months, and I’m counting the days ’til adventure.

7. What radio station are you flipping on before a road trip?
   a. All the hottest hits, I like my music upbeat and fast-paced!
   b. Tried-and-true classic rock! You can never go wrong with the oldies.
   c. I’m pushing the “seek” button and listening to whatever tunes first! Life is more fun with a little mystery.

Mostly A’s  The Party Doesn’t Start Until You Arrive

You have a magnetic energy that can’t be tamed. You take the top off life’s convertible, grab the wheel with white knuckles, and speed toward any experience that calls your name. The way you see it, life’s far too short to waste time—you dive right into the things that call your name. Cheers to that! Pair your next Santa Maria Valley getaway with the Foxen Canyon Wine Trail or the Santa Maria Valley Wine Trolley, both of which give you plenty of time to see and do more. Check out Naughty Oak Brewing Co. to sample a flight of craft beer, and order in from Pizzeria Bello Forno for the perfect vacation meal.

Mostly B’s  Rush Hour Has Nothing On The Golden Hours

Everything about you is casual-cool. You love few things more than a well-planned adventure—but you’re also perfectly comfortable with a night spent kicking your feet up and worrying about precisely nothing at all. You figured out one of life’s best-kept secrets a long time ago: hurrying is overrated. The best things in life will wait. So go ahead, take your sweet time. Head to FOXEN Vineyard or Riverbench Vineyard & Winery for some relaxing wine tasting. Pick up some goodies at Old Town Market and make your way to the Guadalupe-Nipomo Dunes for a beach picnic. Head for a true Central Coast classic, Far Western Tavern, to sample authentic Santa Maria Style Barbecue.

Mostly C’s  Adventure Awaits Just Beneath the Surface of the Everyday

You like things simple and grounded—but you’re never afraid to add a little spice. You’ll try a sip of every type of wine and pick a variety of berries before you fill your glass or bowl with the one you like best. Your patience pays off, because, once you’ve found the thing you love most, you’ll call it yours forever. You take a thoughtful approach to life, which makes for juice that’s always worth the squeeze. Enjoy the patio at Presqu’ile Winery or at Rancho Sisquoc Winery. If you’re feeling ultra-adventurous, rent an ATV and hit Oceano. Check out The Hitching Post in Casmalia for open-pit barbecue done right, or follow the Santa Maria Valley Taco Trail.
We've loved visiting the Santa Maria Valley of California for years, ever since our first visit in 2017. We wanted to take a different approach to visiting on our most recent trip, so went with the theme of agritourism. Of course we still enjoyed the beach and nature of the Central Coast, but California agritourism with kids was a hit in more ways than just a fun vacation.

Why the Santa Maria Valley for California agritourism? For three reasons: diversity of farm experiences; wonderful, welcoming people; and it’s gorgeous. Just keep reading..

What is agritourism?
We love agritourism because it’s a very different way to explore and learn. If you’re not familiar, agritourism is the approach of tourism through the lens of farming and agriculture. It’s visiting and interacting with farmers and experiencing both the work and the joy of farming. One of the biggest benefits of agritourism with kids is helping them see and understand where their food comes from.

Tip: A good conversation to have with kids is regarding sustainability and organic farming and labeling. When you start visiting farms and vineyards, you’ll see signs and you’ll hear farmers talking about what they do to ensure they’re growing the best produce possible, so it’s nice to lay some groundwork.

California agritourism in the Santa Maria Valley
The Santa Maria Valley is located about 2.5 hours north of Los Angeles and about a half hour south of San Luis Obispo. With the ample sunshine and cool coastal air funneling up the valley, it’s an ideal place for growing countless crops, particularly grapes. And cabbage. And cutting-flowers. Everything.

Santa Maria Valley Wine Country
Someday we’ll get to do a trip through the Santa Maria Valley wine country that’s dedicated to vineyards and wine tasting. It’s so easy though to add it to a California agritourism itinerary though; it’s super simple to make a short visit to any number of wineries.

Something awesome to look for when visiting Santa Maria Valley wineries are notes and signage about their sustainability and water conservation.
Droughts are no joke and you’ll no doubt hear about them if you’re exploring California agritourism, so hearing what the individual farms and vineyards are doing to conserve water and manage their resources appropriately is really cool. For example, Presqu’ile Winery participates in the SIP Certified program: Sustainability In Practice.

Santa Maria Valley wine highlights include some kickin’ Pinot Noirs and Dolcettos. Due to the climate (remember the cool air I mentioned) and the terroir (said terr-wah), the area produces some delicious cool climate grapes in addition to the standard cabs and chardonnays. If you get the chance to taste a variety of Pinot Noirs side by side, you may instantly feel like a certified sommelier, just because the wines can vary so greatly all within the same appellation.

Tips for wine tasting with kids

I’ll be honest that the most enjoyable wine tasting happens when you don’t have kiddos with you, but there are ways to make a winery visit fun for them too. Wine making is all about science! When visiting a winery, particularly one that has a vineyard or production facility attached, there are lots of interesting steps to winemaking that kids will enjoy. From stomping the grapes (seasonal, in fall) to touring cellars and wine caves, wine tasting can be very family friendly.

Tips:
- Prepare your own kid-friendly tasting in advance (apples, cheese, juice)
- Choose a winery that notes kid or family friendly on their website (call for details)
- Bring an activity for the kids—we bring coloring books or a travel journal for them
- Invite your kids to ask questions of staff, particularly the farmers or winemakers

With a little planning wine tasting with kids can be really easy and add an element of fun for adults on a California agritourism trip.

In the Santa Maria Valley, we know nothing pairs together better than wine and live entertainment—be it music, stand up comedy or theater.

Here, you can enjoy live music or comedy shows while indulging in farm-to-table cuisine, award-winning wines and delicious craft beers. If you’re looking beyond live music or comedy, you’re in luck. It’s always theater season in this region. From comedies to dramas to musicals, you can enjoy live performances in open-air venues by our best coastal actors for a night of endless fun at the following venues:

PCPA (Pacific Conservatory of the Performing Arts)
For more than 50 years, the PCPA (Pacific Conservatory Theatre of the Performing Arts) has served the Central Coast with a broad variety of work — from Shakespeare to Broadway musicals, guests will experience performances that are nothing short of excellent. With year-round entertainment, PCPA offers a must-visit theater experience for both locals and visitors. You can watch shows at the original PCPA theater in Santa Maria or at the Solvang Festival Theater.

The Great American Melodrama and Vaudeville
Recognized for its sawdust-covered floors, cabaret tables, and actors from across the country, The Great American Melodrama and Vaudeville offers quality interactive entertainment, making it the perfect place for any night out on the town. Enjoy in-house restaurant options as you laugh the night away watching an unforgettable performance.

Santa Maria Civic Theatre
Founded in 1959, the Santa Maria Civic Theatre is the first organization in the area to offer year-round live theater performances. With more than 200 productions under its belt, the Santa Maria Civic Theatre is one of the oldest-running continuous community theaters between Ventura and Monterey.

The Santa Maria Philharmonic Society
The Santa Maria Philharmonic Society is our region’s professional orchestra in residence. This symphony orchestra offers excellent classical music concerts for music lovers, as well as special programs for kids and families. The Philharmonic hits all the high notes with classical concerts each season.

Weekly Live Music
Whether you’re in the mood for a glass of Pinot or a cold IPA, the Santa Maria Valley has something special to satisfy your taste buds and your ears. Presqu’ile, Costa de Oro, FOXEN, CORE, Vino et Amicis and other local wine tasting rooms have frequent live music. Naughty Oak Brewing Company and Blast 825 Brewery also have live shows.

LIGHT THE GRILL AND BRING HOME

SANTA MARIA STYLE BARBECUE
Known for exceptional wine and traditional Santa Maria Style Barbecue, it's no question that the Santa Maria Valley has delicious culinary traditions that prove good taste never goes out of style.

Now, you can bring a taste of the Valley home to your very own kitchen. Inside our Santa Maria Style Cookbook, you'll find recipes for every facet of an authentic Santa Maria Style Barbecue spread: tangy Santa Maria Style salsa, pinquito beans, simple Santa Maria green salad, buttery garlic bread, and Santa Maria Style tri-tip.

Santa Maria Style barbecue has been dubbed the nation’s “fifth style” of barbecue, among the regions of Texas, Carolinas, Memphis and Kansas City. Our style has been around since the mid 1800s, when Spanish settlers set foot in the region. Over the years, Santa Maria Style Barbecue has grown in popularity because of its unique, somewhat smoky flavor and seasoning. The recipe was perfected in the 1950s and copyrighted by the Santa Maria Chamber of Commerce to preserve the tradition’s integrity.

Bring this delicious and historic dish to your dinner table. With a simple dry rub of kosher salt, granulated garlic and ground pepper that only takes a couple minutes to prepare, this signature dish gets its oaky taste from being directly and indirectly slow-roasted over open fires of native red oak. Just as the vaqueros (cowboys) and local ranchers ate this meal more than a century ago, Santa Maria Style Barbecue is best when paired with its original side dishes, including garlic bread dipped in butter, chunky salsa and a simple green salad. We also serve tri-tip with pinquito beans, a small pink bean that natively grows on the Central Coast.

Authentic Santa Maria Style Pinquito Beans

You’ll Need:
- 1 pound pinquito beans
- 1 strip bacon, diced
- ½ cup ham, diced
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ¾ cup tomato puree
- ¼ cup red chile sauce
- 1 tablespoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon sugar

To Prepare Your Pinquito Beans:
- Place the dry beans in a strainer and remove any stones.
- Rinse beans and place them in a pot. Fill with water, and allow beans to soak overnight.
- Drain beans through a strainer, then place back in a pot with fresh water.
- Simmer over low-medium heat for 2 hours or until tender.
- In a separate pan, sauté bacon and ham until lightly browned.
- Add garlic to ham and bacon; sauté 1 to 2 minutes longer.
- Add tomato puree, chile sauce, sugar, mustard and salt to pan with ham and bacon. Stir and let combine for 2-3 minutes over low-medium heat. Remove from heat.
- Drain most of liquid off beans and then stir in the sauce. Simmer all together for 30 minutes. Keep warm until ready to serve.

Santa Maria Valley Restaurant Month is the perfect time to prepare your palate for local fare and lovely libations #SantaMariaStyle.

Every January during California Restaurant Month, Santa Maria Valley propels food and drink to next-level status. Beloved restaurants, wineries and breweries offer up everything from wine pairings to tastings and special menu items.

Visitors can savor dishes such as a cuban grilled chicken at The Century Room inside The Historic Santa Maria Inn or sample a charcuterie box and a glass of vino at cnagy Wines. Whether it be Santa Maria Style Barbecue, pizza, enchiladas or a tasting flight, there is sure to be something to wrap your taste buds around. In 2020, all participants will be offering something delicious for $20.20.

The 2020 Craft Cocktail Contest celebrates mixologists and their craft. Each artisanal cocktail represents the culture of each participating bar and restaurant. Every element showcases house-made ingredients or is tailored specifically to represent the heart and soul of the establishment. An overall winner will be selected as well as a People’s Choice award.

California is the No. 1 destination for food-loving travelers in the U.S. Santa Maria Valley is no exception, boasting the region’s bounty for all visitors to experience. Don’t miss out on this once-a-year culinary showcase.
